

POETRY READING:

THE NANJING MASSACRE

with WING TEK LUM

Monday, April 29, 2013

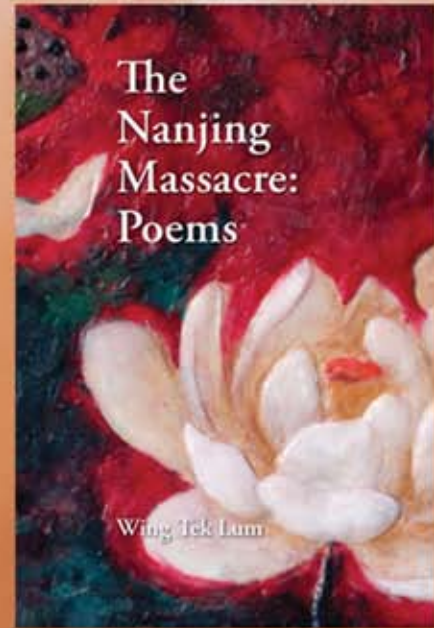

12:00PM-1:30PM

UCLA Rolfe Hall, Room 1301

Lunch will be served

Registration requested: email aascsvp@aasc.ucla.edu or visit <http://nanjingmassacre.eventbrite.com/>

Commentary by Professor Guo Yingjian, Dean and Professor of English, School of Foreign Studies, Minzu University of China; Senior Research Fellow, Department of English, Harvard University

Epigrammatic, elegiac, and luminous, these poems beckon the buried voices of daughters and sons, husbands and wives, soldiers and survivors– Chinese and Japanese alike. This masterful and courageous collection allows us to breathe deeply over the shallows of history and to understand, through poetry, how “the truth shall set us free.”

- Russell C. Leong, Contributing Editor, Amerasia Journal

Wing Tek Lum is a business man and Honolulu poet. His first collection of poetry, Expounding the Doubtful Points, received the American Book Award in 1988.

Co-sponsored by the UCLA Asian American Studies Center, Department of Asian American Studies, Department of English, and International Institute.