LEGACY

March on Washington — 1963

We are the children of Martin and Malcolm.
Black, brown, red, and white.
And so we cannot be silent
As we witness the weapons assembled
To blister our souls and incinerate our planet.
We are the children of Martin and Malcolm.
Our ancestors,
Proud and Brave,
Defied the storms and power
Of masters and madmen.
We are the children of Martin and Malcolm.
And when bombs push the sun from the sky
And threaten to fill the air with the blood and screams
Of the dead and dying,
We cannot be silent.
We are the children of Martin and Malcolm.
Our birthright is to be creators of history.
Our glory is to struggle.
You shall know our names as you know theirs.
Sojourner and Douglass, John Brown and Garrison.
We are the children of Martin and Malcolm.
Black, brown, red, and white.
Our Right, Our Duty
To shake the world with
A new dream!

Come, Shake the World with a New Dream

"As a nation-state among nation-states we can no longer allow the capitalist interest in making profit to become our interest at the expense of our human interest in living in harmony with other nations and with Nature. Therefore one of our first decisions as a New Self-Governing America must be to divest ourselves unilaterally of all our nuclear weapons so as to stop our drift into dehumanizing terrorism under the pretense that we are providing national security to our people. There is no national security in nuclear weapons. There is only national oblivion, the possible annihilation of our entire planet, and meanwhile the miseducation of our children to believe that overwhelming force is the solution to complex international and domestic questions."
